Flash flood causes disaster

Schmidtsburg

Saturday

14 January 2011

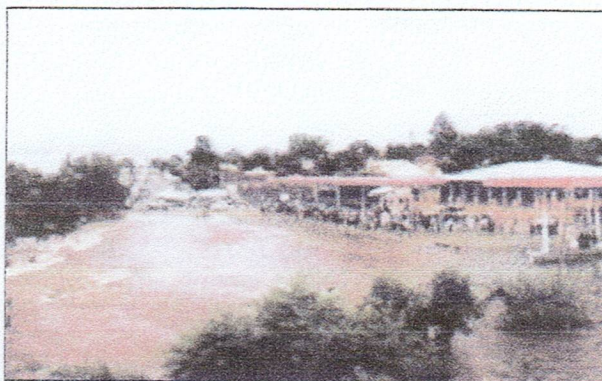

Twelve people died and forty-five were rescued from trees and rooftops in this Northern Cape town.

The disaster happened after very heavy rains on Friday. It rained much more than people had expected.

It was the worst rainstorm in the town since 1985. Two people died when they tried to cross a bridge and their cars were swept away.

Emergency staff from the police, the fire brigade and the army rescued people. Police are still finding-out if all the victims have been found. Many people in the town have lost everything in their homes. Houses in low-lying areas too close to the river had the worst damage.

Some of the victims did not listen to warnings by the police.

Many people have no food and clothes. They are now staying in church halls or with friends and relatives.

It will take six months to repair or rebuild everything. The mayor asked everyone to stand together.
